October: London Theatre
01 October, 2009
by Spoonfed Team

The Spoonfed Theatre Team pick out the biggest plays opening in London this October.

From October 1st
Broken Glass @ Tricycle Theatre
The ever-clever Tricycle Theatre present this Olivier Award winning drama about a German immigrant couple in New York. While Philip concerns himself with assimilating, his wife Sylvia suffers paralysis after reading about the events of Kristallnacht. The doctor charged with diagnosing her strange condition soon forms a dangerous relationship with her, threatening the family.
Best for: Mystery, history and love

From October 14th
Flashdance The Musical @ Shaftesbury Theatre
Nothing can beat Robert Webb dancing to 'What a Feeling' on Let's Dance for Comic Relief but this could be almost as entertaining. She's a welder who wants to be a ballerina people! Do we really need to say much more? Flashdance has already begun its previews and will officially open on October 14th!
Best for: The better of a track that is 'What A Feeling'

From 19th October
When We Are Married @ Garrick Theatre
In this classic J.B. Priestley play, three married couples discover their vicar was never licensed and they've been living in sin so to speak. Angers flare, lives unravel, resentment boils over, secrets are revealed but will relationships survive?
Best for: Classic Priestly and his cleverly revealed secrets

From 19th October
The Cave @ Blue Elephant Theatre
By Meryn Peake, The Cave is a look at human nature and what happens to it when we are subjected to unwavering authority. A family exist in a world with conformity at the heart of their lives. When a young girl comes to their cave, she stirs emotions and dares to ask questions.
Best for: Big questions and blurry answers

From 26th October
Liliana! @ Pentameters Theatre
A funny, sweet look at the amazing life and personality of Liliana Skala by her granddaughter Libby. Liliana, the first female architect in Austria fled her homeland when the Nazis invaded and moved to American where she became an Oscar nominated actress for Lilies of the Land despite not knowing what an Oscar was.
Best for: Superbly performed snappy drama and stellar characters.